

BUSINESS PROFILE: Techdept

Techdept is a web design and build company based at the Electric Works. Working in Sheffield for 8 years, Techdept have built a reputation for being a team that delivers. This is based upon a strong culture, and ongoing investment in new technology and knowledge tools.

Techdept employ 15 staff, 13 based in Sheffield and two in London. They feel that Sheffield offers some great opportunities for businesses like theirs, including recruiting talented people. Techdept has benefitted from the city's two Universities offering a pool of talent.

“We have four members of staff that started as graduates and who now have established positions; at least two of these are now senior. There is a community of talented web designers and developers in Sheffield.”

Daniel Kirby, Managing Director

Techdept have built a successful service business delivering a range of projects across web, social and mobile platforms. Clients include British Gas, American Express, and Activision. They have an exciting new digital product – Tidybrand – as part of a plan to diversify its income. This means growth for the company and recruitment of new staff to support that progression.

Techdept recognise that being in Sheffield gives it a terrific foundation for its future development.

“Sheffield feels very grounded, it’s a good place for quality of life and a great place to build a team. Sheffield is world renown for making quality things, we believe we are part of that heritage.”

Daniel Kirby, Managing Director

Creative Sheffield have supported Techdept both formally and informally through events to help promote business development.

“We have had marketing support and networking opportunities (both for Techdept and other entrepreneurial activity we are involved in). The team have always been supportive of us, professional and clear.”
